Figure 6.4. North-facing photograph showing poorly plastered niche, formed from earlier modified crawl-hole, detailing the final infilling of the niche with densely packed crushed brick (20517), perhaps associated with room fill to the north, and final brick blocking of the niche (20215 and 20216) (photograph by Arek Klimowicz).

Figure 6.3. East-facing photograph showing earliest incarnation of the floor surface (20543) which may have functioned with a possible crawl-hole cut in the northern wall of Space 492, including a second cluster (20542) associated with unit (21208), consisting of further clay balls, ground stone objects, animal bones and gathered pebbles (photograph by Trevor Iliff).
